D.A. asks court to order Chris Brown to complete his community labor sentence in Los Angeles County

LOS ANGELES – District Attorney Jackie Lacey said today that entertainer Chris Brown failed to provide “credible, competent or verifiable evidence” that he completed his court-ordered community labor. She asked the court to order Brown to fulfill his obligation in Los Angeles County.

On August 25, 2009, Brown was ordered to complete 180 days of community labor and was allowed by the court to do so in his home state of Virginia as part of a five-year probationary sentence for assault.

In a motion filed by Deputy District Attorney Mary Murray, the court was asked to decline to accept Brown’s community labor in Virginia due to what appears to be “significant discrepancies indicating at best sloppy documentation and at worst fraudulent reporting.”
